

Sara Edwards

Dalhousie University

Sara is entering her second year at the Schulich School of Law at Dalhousie University. She is particularly interested in criminal and family law, as well as investigating systemic issues surrounding legal response to gender-based violence. This past year she worked with The Canadian Centre for Legal Innovation in Sexual Assault Response (CCLISAR) to research intersections of AI technology and sexual assault response. She also worked at the Dalhousie Legal Aid Clinic providing legal information to Nova Scotians about their tenant rights.

Prior to law school, Sara completed a Bachelor of Arts with Distinction at the University of Alberta and a Master of Arts in Communication and Culture at Ryerson and York Universities.

In her free time, Sara also enjoys hiking, chilling with friends and her cat Morpheus, binging reality TV, and thrifting for clothes.

Sara is very grateful to the Schulich School of Law's Academic Excellence Fund for Internships, which is generously sponsoring her Fellowship.
